

Johnson & Johnson Statement on Aylstock, Witkin, Kreis and Overholtz, PLC (AWKO) Advising “Yes” to the Plan

June 10, 2024 - Attributable to Erik Haas, Worldwide Vice President of Litigation, Johnson & Johnson:

“Just one week into the voting period, yet another leading mass tort law firm has announced its support of the reorganization Plan for the final and comprehensive resolution of the ovarian talc claims.

Aylstock, Witkin, Kreis and Overholtz, PLC (“AWKO”), a firm that was adamantly opposed to a resolution in bankruptcy, announced that they too are advising their clients to vote “yes” for the Plan, as it is in the claimants’ best interest. In their press release, AWKO points to the fact that the Plan “would secure meaningful, timely recoveries for eligible clients” and “allocates substantial resources” as to why they are voting in favor.

AWKO’s announcement adds to the growing support the Plan is receiving, including most recently from the Ad Hoc Committee of Supporting Counsel (the “AHC”) representing over 70,000 claimants, the Future Claims Representative (“FCR”) representing all future ovarian claimants, and the Keller Postman firm, another leading plaintiffs law firm that had opposed prior resolutions.

We continue to build overwhelming support for the plan and call on the last few firms with conflicted financial interests to put their client’s well-being ahead of their own. You can learn more information on the recently launched OfficialTalcClaims.com.

Let them vote.”
